Private demolition isn't the city's responsibility

Questions. Officials investigate demolition rules following fatal building collapse earlier this month.

After it issues the permit, the city washes its hands, officials said.

According to Deputy Mayor Everett Gillison, the city is not accountable for demolition on a private construction site once the Department of Licenses and Inspections issues a permit.

Gillison, along with L&I Commissioner Carlton Williams, testified during the first of five hearings held by a City Council special investigations committee charged with evaluating the fatal building collapse at 22nd and Market streets that left six people dead.

Gillison said private demolition work is not held to the same standards as city demolition projects. When Councilman Jim Kenney asked Williams why guidelines aren't the same for both, Williams replied, "It's the responsibility of the contractor."

Gillison said contractors are on the hook for their own construction supervision. "Just because we give someone a permit does not make us responsible," he said.

Kenney asked if demolition commissioners should be expected to have more advanced training than just passing a civil service test. Williams said he thought the current process worked just fine.

Gillison said he and Williams could not disclose too much information due to pending criminal investigations and litigation.

The site at 22nd and Market streets was inspected twice in February and a third time in May after a resident submitted a complaint. The complaint was deemed unfounded.

Committee chair Councilman Curtis Jones Jr. said it's important for committee members to not assign blame, but to develop standards to prevent future catastrophes.

Surveillance

SafeCam a success

The Philadelphia police SafeCam program, through which civilians can register the location of their surveillance cameras so officers can contact them for footage in the event of a crime, is proving a success, leading investigators to solve 85 crimes and make 37 arrests since January, the department announced yesterday.

Most recently, the program led to the arrest of Michael Showers, 30, suspected of robbing a Subway sandwich shop in South Philadelphia.

There are currently 360 registered cameras in the city. Registration, which simply entails giving out basic information, is free, confidential and only takes about 10 minutes. METRO

Sentenced. Man gets maximum for robbery of 93-year-old woman

A judge yesterday handed down the maximum penalty to Antonio Santiago, 30, who was convicted of robbery and assault for the brutal Easter Sunday attack last year of Estelle DiCamillo, 93.

Calling the incident "a crime against humanity," Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas Judge Robert Coleman sentenced Santiago to 20 to 40 years behind bars for the assault on April 8, 2012.

Investigators said DiCamillo was walking home from Bells Corner Supermarket on the 8300 block of Loretto Avenue when Santiago attacked her from behind, grabbed her pocketbook, pushed her to the ground and fled.

Coleman pointed out Santiago made away with only a pack of Kleenex, a partial denture and some checks that were in DiCamillo's purse. "She would have probably given them to you if you asked her," he said.

DiCamillo's daughter, Anne Marie Kennedy, testified her mother remains in chronic pain and on constant medication, calling the woman "a shell of what she used to be."

"It's like the life has been sucked out of her," she said. ALEX WIGGLESWORTH

Police announce June bike law crackdown

Travelers of all stripes are reminded to watch the road. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

Beware. Police are enforcing traffic safety laws for bikes, cars and pedestrians.

Philadelphia police, along with the Mayor's Office of Transportation and Utilities, announced they'll boost enforcement of bicycle traffic laws through the month of June.

Twelve extra officers will be stationed in Center City to make stops and issue citations to those "who need some tough love reminding them to travel safely," a release from the Streets Department states.

But bikers aren't the only ones who should keep their eyes on the road. The crackdown, funded by a $40,000 PennDOT grant, also applies to pedestrians and drivers.

"When one person doesn't follow the rules of the road, it starts a domino effect of bad behavior that contributes to making streets unsafe for everyone," Bicycle Coalition of Greater Philadelphia Director Alex Doty said in a statement.

"Bicyclists are legal road users, just like drivers and walkers, and we recognize that the rules of the road apply to all of us."

Philly area traffic congestion costs drivers

Gridlock. Philly congestion costs commuters $3.4B each year.

Traffic congestion in the Philadelphia area has high costs, a report released yesterday by national transportation group TRIP found. Gridlock each year costs Philadelphians $3.4 billion, including 76 million gallons of wasted fuel and 156 million hours of time lost to traffic jams.

The report, "The Region's Most Expensive Commutes," identified the costliest corridors in the area when it comes to congestion. I-676 from I-95 to I-76 ranked No. 1, costing the average driver $2,301 annually in lost time and gas. PA 611 from the Pennsylvania Turnpike to I-95 came in second.

Quoted

"Congested roadways limit opportunities for employment, economic growth, education, recreation and social opportunities."

TRIP executive director Will Wilkins

The Pennsylvania Governor's Transportation Funding Advisory Commission found the state needs to spend an additional $552 million each year on projects like improved traffic management and increased highway capacity just to relieve current congestion. That budget gap is expected to rise to $1.4 billion each year by 2030.

"Without a significant investment in Pennsylvania's transportation system, drivers will continue to waste time and fuel, businesses will lose their competitive edge and quality of life will be diminished," Pennsylvania Highway Information Association managing director Jason Wagner said.

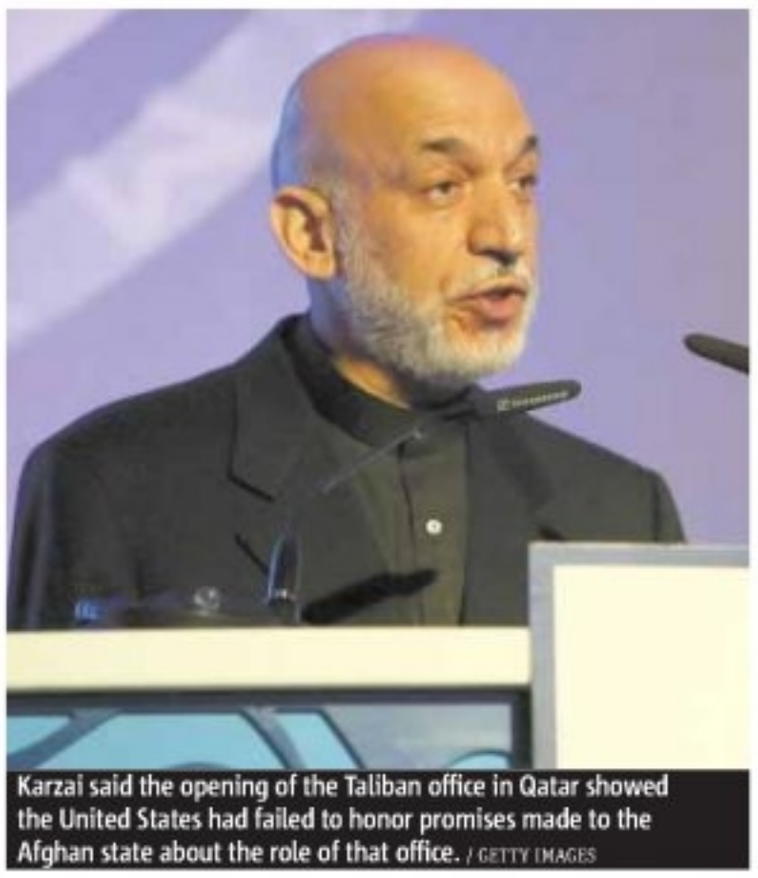
Afghan government to shun US talks with Taliban



Karzai said the opening of the Taliban office in Qatar showed the United States had failed to honor promises made to the Afghan state about the role of that office. / GETTY IMAGES Change. Commitments by the U.S. and the Taliban to meet have raised hopes for a negotiated peace.

Afghan President Hamid Karzai said yesterday his government would not join U.S. peace talks with the Taliban and halted negotiations with Washington on a troop pact, underscoring the fragile nature of hopes for a negotiated peace in Afghanistan.

The United States and the Taliban have said officials from both sides will meet in Doha, the capital of Qatar, today in a step forward for a stuttering peace process after 12 years of bloody and costly war between U.S.-led forces and the insurgents.

But Afghan officials, angered by the opening of a Taliban political office in Doha on Tuesday, said the United States had violated assurances it would not give official status to the insurgents.

"As long as the peace process is not Afghan-led, the High Peace Council will not participate in the talks in Qatar," Karzai said in a statement, referring to a body he set up in 2010 to seek a negotiated peace with the Taliban.

Underlining the importance of the process to the United States, the State Department said Secretary of State John Kerry would travel to Doha for meetings with senior Qatari officials on Friday and Saturday. A U.S. delegation had arrived in Qatar earlier for the Taliban negotiations, a diplomatic source said. REUTERS

Speech. President challenges Russia to cut nukes further

President Barack Obama used a speech in Berlin yesterday to call on Russia to revive the push for a world without nuclear weapons, offering to cut deployed nuclear arsenals by a third, but Moscow immediately poured scorn on his proposal.

Speaking in Berlin, Obama urged Russia to help build on the "New START" treaty that requires both countries to cut stockpiles of deployed nuclear weapons to 1,550 each by 2018.

The speech was given a frosty reception by Moscow, which said it could "not take such proposals seriously" while Washington was beefing up its own anti-missile defenses. REUTERS

Microsoft offering hefty bounties to thwart hackers

Wanted. The best hackers are heavily recruited by the military, intelligence agencies and big corporations.

Microsoft Corp. is looking to recruit computer geeks in its ongoing efforts to protect Windows PCs from attacks, offering rewards of as much as $150,000 to anybody who helps identify and fix major security holes in its software.

Microsoft unveiled the rewards program, one of the most generous in the high-tech industry to date, yesterday as it sought ways to prevent sophisticated attackers from subverting new security technologies it has introduced in the latest versions of the Windows operating system.

The program is open to computer experts as young as 14, though minors need permission from their parents. Residents of countries under U.S. sanctions, such as Cuba, Iran, North Korea, Sudan and Syria, are banned from the program.

The sheer size of the bonus is likely to grab the attention of the hacking community, though claiming the big money will require them to do battle with Microsoft's latest anti-hacking technology and then detail their approach. REUTERS

Calm. Government, protesters seek to draw sting from unrest

Turkey's deputy prime minister said yesterday he had no objection to silent anti-government protests inspired by a symbolic "Standing Man" vigil, comments that could help draw the sting out of three weeks of often violent demonstrations.

Protests against Prime Minister Tayyip Erdogan's government have become increasingly creative in recent days, as police and demonstrators seek to avoid the fierce clashes that have dented Turkey's reputation for stability in the volatile Middle East.

Police fired teargas and water cannon to disperse around 5,000 demonstrators in the northern city of Eskisehir overnight, Dogan news agency said, and there were small disturbances in Ankara, but nowhere near the scale of previous weeks.

In Istanbul, the cradle of the unrest that has unsettled markets and presented Erdogan with the greatest public challenge of his 10-year rule, a sense of calm returned to streets around the central Taksim Square that saw nights of running battles. REUTERS

Brazil protests proceed as smaller cities join in

Complaints. The nationwide protests were sparked by the transportation fare increases.

Protesters blocked roads in Sao Paulo and marched toward a stadium hosting a major international soccer game in Brazil's northeast yesterday in a growing wave of nationwide demonstrations against poor public services, inflation and other woes in Latin America's biggest country.

After more than a week, the biggest series of protests to sweep Brazil in more than two decades continued in major capitals and moved into smaller cities. Focused at first in cities like Sao Paulo, Rio de Janeiro and the capital, Brasilia, demonstrations in more than 70 smaller cities were expected across the country today.

Yesterday's protests in Sao Paulo, the site of the most frequent marches, followed overnight demonstrations that led to looting and vandalism. Police arrested more than 63 people after protesters torched a police facility, tried to storm City Hall and broke windows and ransacked stores.

"People have the right to participate in protests," Sao Paulo Mayor Fernando Haddad said at a news conference. He was critical, however, of unrest that interfered with "the right to get to work, to get home." REUTERS

Skin. Naked gymnast faces charges over transit stop conduct

A trained gymnast whose naked acrobatics and harassment of passengers at a San Francisco public transit station were captured on video and circulated widely on the Internet is facing criminal charges over his antics, authorities said.

Yeiner Alberto Perez Garizabalo, 24, was caught on video doing handstands and contortions on turnstiles and front flips off a concrete newsstand — all in the nude — at a Bay Area Rapid Transit District station on May 10.

The video that drew more than half a million hits on YouTube shows dozens of people watching idly or ignoring Garizabalo as he accosted at least three passengers during his gymnastics routine, putting a man in a headlock and charging two women before being arrested by BART police.

Garizabalo was committed to a nearby hospital after his arrest, but no police report was filed and he was released the following day, said Stephanie Ong Stillman, spokeswoman for the San Francisco district attorney's office. REUTERS

1 Kim is extremely popular online

I was digging around the Internet yesterday for stories for today's column and stumbled upon the above on People.com. These are the top stories on their website for the past 72 hours. It is all Kim, all the time.

And even though I write about her all the time, this shocked me. I mean, I know she has millions of followers on Twitter. I know the Kardashian Kollection is a multimillion-dollar business. She and her family practically own the E! network. Basically, I know she gets the clicks — but does she really get all of them? Not even People's "Here Comes Honey Boo Boo Premiere Will Be a 'Watch 'n Sniff' Event" article can crack the Kardashian domination on their site? What is this world coming to?

Paula Deen is a racist jerk

The fearless National Enquirer has unearthed a video of famed "chef" Paula Deen admitting to using the N-word as well as making myriad terrible racist jokes aimed at African-Americans and Jewish people. Deen was filmed in a May 17 deposition to defend herself and her brother, Bubba Hiers, against a lawsuit filed by the former general manager of their Savannah, Ga., restaurant. Lisa Jackson is suing the family for use of defamatory language by Deen, and sexual harassment and infliction of distress and assault by Hiers.

The worst from the tape? Deen admitted to saying she wanted "black waiters to play the role of slaves in a wedding party she was planning."

Deen also reportedly gave several examples of when she used the N-word and fesses up to making racist jokes about "Jewish people, rednecks, black folks. ... I can't determine what offends another person." Her defense is "they're jokes."

Actually, no they aren't. Even in Georgia, those aren't jokes. And honestly — what kind of bride wants "slave chic" as the theme of her wedding reception?

Sources tell Star magazine that Moore has previously confided in friends that Kutcher was not the most well-endowed lover she's had, and now she's reportedly flashing pictures on her phone to pals that prove it. "Demi is still hurting that Ashton cheated and then rebounded so soon after their split," a source says. "It could be the angle, but the photos don't leave a big impression."

Miley Cyrus admits to using pot

Miley Cyrus isn't being shy when it comes to her opinions on drugs and alcohol. "I think alcohol is way more dangerous than marijuana — people can be mad at me for saying that, but I don't care. I've seen a lot of people spiral down with alcohol, but I've never seen that happen with weed," she tells Rolling Stone during an online Q&A. "As long as it isn't illegal, there are far more dangerous things. And it's legal in the state of California. So I'm happy to live in California, a place where you can be whoever you want to be."

And so finally, dear readers, we have an explanation behind her recent outfit choices.

Premiere of 'Madonna: The MDNA Tour'

Hilton hottie

1 Heiress Nicky Hilton was pretty in pink at the premiere of Madonna's tour doc, "Madonna: The MDNA Tour," held at the Paris Theatre in New York City Tuesday.

Ms. Stewart

2 Martha Stewart is a Madonna fan? Apparently. The domestic goddess made a quick dash into the theater.

'Project' Siriano

3 Designer Christian Siriano appeared cool and casual.

Fashion 'Roy'alty

4 Designer Rachel Roy popped up.

Bravo, Andy

5 "Watch What Happens Live" host Andy Cohen was also there (of course he was).

Who's that girl?

6 The lady of the hour, Madonna.

Unfinished legacy. Courtney has choice words for promoters, former bandmates, bands who reunite and just about everybody.

When interviewing Courtney Love, you don't want to upset her, especially within the first minute. We begin innocuously enough with a question about her current tour, which was listed on one venue's website as "Courtney Love performing songs from 'Live Through This,' 'Celebrity Skin' & 'Nobody's Daughter,' including 'Violet,' 'Miss World,' 'Celebrity Skin,' 'Malibu,' 'Skinny Little Bitch' & More!"

This is news to her, and she vows to let the responsible parties know her thoughts. "I'm gonna tear someone's f—ing head off," she says.

Through all of the tangents the rest of the call takes — and it takes many, from Rod Stewart to investment strategies — she keeps returning to this new info, and whatever isn't about it is peppered with similar bitterness.

"If you want to see something really miserable, watch that Pixies reunion frickin' documentary," she says at one point.

Love says she has an album's worth of new material recorded and will be drawing from those songs.

"I'm not playing the singles though, which are the funnest ones. ... I don't want them to leak."

If the only new songs she's playing are not the so-called funnest ones, how does she stay fresh?

"I stay fresh and dainty all the time, and I'm really good at taking baths," she jokes, picking apart our phrasing, "but beyond that, I'm not ever going to do that oldies circuit thing ever."

The Hole story

'Go on, take everything!'

Love says that since her last full release, the 2010 Hole album "Nobody's Daughter," she has given up the Hole moniker and the idea of any sort of reunion with the formative lineup, which included drummer Patty Schemel, guitarist Eric Erlandson and bassist Melissa Auf der Maur.

"I would be happy — as much as I love Shawn [Dailey, bassist] — to take Melissa back, but Melissa won't do it unless Eric does it, and I'm not doing it with Eric," she says at an uninterruptible pace. "I just won't do it. The guy went into my storage, took 74 guitars out of storage, took my entire backline, which is Kurt's backline, so one side says Hole, the other side says Nirvana. ... I'm about to start pressing charges against him."

CHARLIE DAY

The TV star talks about playing a cartoon made mostly of legs — who's been to jail.

MORE THAN JUST SUNNY

As the furry purple oddball Art in "Monsters University," Charlie Day walks away with nearly every scene he's in, which isn't surprising since his monster is mostly just a pair of legs with a face where the crotch would be. Among early audiences, Art is fast becoming a favorite — or at least that's what people are telling Day. "Well, people have been saying that to me, and I don't know what their ulterior motives are, but I appreciate it," Day says.

There is just something captivating about Art.
You know, he's a crazy guy. He's filled with absurd non sequiturs. He's positive, he's an optimist and he's been to jail. What's cooler than that? And then the best thing is, you get to see what it would be like to be all legs.

How much were you involved in the design and development?
I did all the design myself. I did all the drawings, I did most of the movie. [Laughs] No, I did nothing. I did absolutely nothing. By the time I showed up here, they had already animated a scene using lines from "It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia" with the character. I almost feel like they could've taken certain words that I've said from things and cobbled together the entire performance, but they were nice enough to let me do some of the work.

Did you start off college with one idea of what you were going to do with your life and end up with another?
Yes. I was a huge baseball guy growing up, as was everyone in my town. I was passionate about it, I was halfway decent at it, but not ultimately good enough. And by college I realized that it's not going to go any further, and then I started dabbling in acting and the arts, and all that came much easier and more naturally to me. I think it was time to accept that I could maybe play a baseball player in a movie, but that was the only way anyone was ever going to pay to watch me play.

So do you keep an eye out for baseball-themed roles now?

The problem is I'm getting older, so I'm starting to almost have to look at the coach roles. They've been passing me by, but believe me — if one popped up, I'd jump at it.

10 Films out right now

1 'World War Z' A PG-13 zombie movie that underwent massive re-shoots and is directed by the guy who made the only boring Bond movie ever? Best of luck with that.

2 'Monsters University' Once upon a time, "Monsters, Inc." was the worst Pixar movie, due to it only being really incredibly wonderful instead of insanely, amazingly wonderful. Now we'll just take one that at least doesn't feature Larry the Cable Guy.

3 'The Bling Ring' A filmmaker (in)famous for work sympathetic toward bored richies tackles the true story of teens who stole from the likes of Paris Hilton and Orlando Bloom. Emma Watson co-stars.

4 'Much Ado About Nothing' Hot off "The Avengers," TV legend Joss Whedon turns to Shakespeare, adapting a play that was already memorably filmed in 1993.

Brad Pitt and family go on a nice shopping trip in "World War Z."
JAAP BUITENDIJK

5 'Dirty Wars' Jeremy Scahill, investigative correspondent over at The Nation, takes his reporting from the page to the screen, with this documentary about America's covert wars that act without accountability.

6 'Augustine' The mono-named Soko is getting raves as a young 19th-century woman being treated by a noted neurologist (Vincent Lindon) after she starts suffering violent, near-orgiastic seizures.

7 'Man of Steel' The last time Superman returned, the result "only" grossed $400 million. But such dismal box office earnings totally didn't happen again, even though this also stars a nobody (Henry Cavill) and also pays slavish homage to the Christopher Reeve S-Man films (aka, the good ones).

8 'This Is the End' Having moved on to better (or lesser) things, the Apatow clan reunites for this, only the third recent comedy about the apocalypse, and the second (after "Rapture-Palooza") with Craig Robinson. Michael Cera's cokehead routine is as lovely as you might have heard.

9 'Fill the Void' Director Rama Burhstein's drama finds a devoutly Orthodox Hasidic teenager in Tel Aviv whose arranged marriage runs into a hitch when she's forced to care for her nephew.

10 'Before Midnight' The second sequel to "Before Sunrise" answers all your questions. Did Celine and Jesse (Julie Delpy and Ethan Hawke) stay together after "Before Sunset"?

REACHING A DIFFERENT F-WORD MILESTONE

Fighting with a partner can be delicate. / BRAND X PICTURES

Don't date, hook up with or marry a—holes. You'll feel more alone than if you were single. That said, even when you find a great lover, tough times eventually come, and you must work through them. Fighting with a new partner is a delicate art. You want to be honest about feelings and expectations; at the same time, you may be afraid the other person will think you're overly sensitive or a raving lunatic. Go for it anyway. Argue. Fighting unearths areas of disagreement and reveals what's in store if things proceed and you get more serious about each other. In those early, heated moments, how do you both behave? Let's set some ground rules and talk about how and where to have your first fights.

How to fight ...

In front of friends or family

- Don't drag your audience into the fight.
- Don't belittle the other person.
- Do keep it simple. Say what you have to say and move on. For example, if someone is silencing you by speaking on your behalf, remind them, "I can speak for myself." No need to say it sharply or add, "You always do that!"

How to fight ...

In the bedroom

- Don't stay up arguing endlessly for hours. Try to come to a resolution on which you both can rest — even if only for the night.
- Do have makeup sex and eventually go to sleep ... you know, the other stuff people do on mattresses.

How to fight ...

Fairly

- Do grow some balls or ovaries and don't stoop to mocking, name-calling or manipulation.
- Don't use empty threats as ultimatums. Avoid repeatedly saying, "If you keep doing this, I'm going to leave you." Either leave or don't.
- Do remember, when it comes to keeping drama out of your love life, "prevention is the best cure." Dating and hooking up are processes of elimination.
- Don't abuse or tolerate abuse.

Funky Brown Chick

TWANNA A. HINES, M.S.

How to fight ...

In public

- Don't assume fighting means shouting. Ages ago, I learned: Lose your temper, lose the argument. It's a simple but good rule.
- Don't forget you are in control of your anger. Others can trigger you, but the response is your choosing.
- Don't be afraid to say what's pissing you off in the moment, even if you aren't alone. It can be awkward and annoying to discuss, "Six hours ago, I didn't like it when you did blah blah blah."

Even better than happy hour

Our guide to neighborhood drink specials this summer. JULIA WEST

Midtown Village

Get ready for takeoff with the weekend flights at Vintage Wine Bar (129 S. 13th St.). If you ever needed an excuse to down – or taste – various wines, this is it. Saturdays and Sundays from 2-4 p.m. you can sip on three wines and nibble on four cheeses for $30. Now you just need to deal with the fact that you'll become a Vintage regular.

South Street

You can travel the world with the wines at Vintage, or you can explore the state with the Summer of I-76 experience at Jet Wine Bar (1525 South St.). Stop in for Tasting Tuesdays where half glasses are half price. You can also create your own flights, if you're feeling saucy.

East Passyunk

Few things are better than Italian water ice during a sticky Philadelphia summer. One thing that does beat it, though, is a boozy Italian water ice. Waste no time getting over to East Passyunk's new addition, Noir (1909 E. Passyunk Ave.) for what is about to become your favorite heat-wave lifesaver. Your options are cherry, chocolate and lemon. And to make it truly Philadelphian, the drinks have a pretzel rod garnish.

Or reach for a "mocktail"

If you're doing a swimsuit season detox sort of thing, nursing a hangover, or just not so keen on alcohol, there are still drink options for you. Get your "mocktail" fix at Vernick Food & Drink in Center City (2031 Walnut St.).

Queen Village

Ela (627 S. 3rd St.) is waving us over for a drink with their new late-night bar menu. The latest happy hour runs from 10 p.m. to midnight. You might remember that the name of each cocktail came from a song by the band Brand New. Little has changed: Though they offer the classics with classic names – like an Old Fashioned — they've also got a new list of elixirs titled in the same manner as in past.

Serrano chef showcases lighter summer selections

Hot chef. Gina Rodriguez chats with us about cooking and being a tourist in Philly.

Gina Rodriguez is executive chef at Serrano. / FELICIA PERRETTI

Chef Gina Rodriguez doesn't slow down. Originally from Arizona, she's worked in the Southwest, San Diego and New Orleans. Rodriguez received the AAA 5 Diamond award in 2008 — the only woman to receive one that year. She also competed on an episode of Food Network's "Chopped" and announced her most recent class at COOK (Taco Tuesday on July 2). Her day job is executive chef at Serrano, where she rewrote the menu to showcase lighter summer selections. She also revamped the menu at Serrano's sister spot, Sassafras. Somehow, she found time to chat with us.

You went to school for psychology long before you went to culinary school. What made you change paths?
I almost went into banking — because when you're 18, you don't know anything yet. But I ended up taking psychology classes and got a tech entry-level job in the behavioral health industry. I eventually moved from tech to case manager when I got my degree, and I was a supervisor for a project I created. Then one day, I woke up and thought about how much I really loved cooking. I applied to culinary school … when I got the letter that said I was accepted, I knew my life was going to change.

What brought you to Philly?
I came to open Kokopelli, which was at 19th and Chestnut. I got in touch with these two guys who were putting together a menu, and they needed someone who knew authentic Southwest food. I was talking to them for about a month, bouncing ideas around. I came out for a tasting, and they hired me that day.

And then you worked at Max and David's, and you've been at Serrano for about a year. You've been in Philly for three years. What has surprised you about the city?
Oh, all kinds of things. When you're far away from the city, you get this impression that it's colder and the people are meaner. But that isn't true at all.

What kind of things do you still want to do or see in Philly?
There's a ton of things I still want to do. I want to go on one of those big tour bus things. You know, where you're riding around with some big cheesy group and someone is at the front telling you crazy stories about the little houses and the history of the city. But by the time I get a day off, I usually veg out and make a big pot of soup.

Punk rock backbone

Interview. Transplants singer Rob Aston talks about the glue that binds this all-star trio.

With the members constantly working on a multitude of projects, it's no wonder that it took so long for the Transplants to release new material. To say that drummer Travis Barker, guitarist Tim Armstrong and singer Rob Aston have kept themselves busy since disbanding in 2006 is an understatement. After eight years, the trio is back with a new album, "In a Warzone," which still blends punk rock with hip-hop, like on previous releases. But this time, the focus is more on punk, says Aston. "We've all grown up listening to different types of music, but punk rock has always been the backbone for all of us," he says. "I personally think that's the best type of music we make together."

To someone who has never listened to you before, how would you describe the Transplants?
If you listen to either our first or second album, it's a little harder to describe because there's so much going on. There are punk rock elements, hip-hop elements, dub elements … all kinds of stuff going on. But I always tell people that we're a punk rock band. We do what we want, and that's punk rock.

Were scheduling conflicts between the three of you the main reason why it took so long to make this album?
We took a break after the Warped Tour in 2005, but I guess we worked on the new album for about three years before we turned it in. Obviously, it wasn't three years straight, because everyone's busy with other projects. So we recorded when we could, and we didn't want to rush this album or turn in something half-a—ed. When you're gone for a long time, you can't come back with just anything. We had to give it our best, and that's what we did. I think it's our best work by far.

Are there any guest vocalists on the new album worth mentioning?
This time around, we only put a few guests on the album. We have Paul Wall on one song, and Bun B and Equipto on another. But that's it, just three rappers. It's kind of funny that this is a punk rock album, but the guests we have are rappers. But that's true to Transplants form. We've always put people on our albums that you normally wouldn't think would be on an album like ours.

Don't need religion to be good

Re: 'Have a little faith in religion' (Metro, June 19) The comments of letter writers Annie Ferris and Linda Whittaker are both versions of the "religion is good because it is useful" argument. The problem with this argument is that the effect of any particular belief system tells us nothing about whether that belief system is true. Secondly, there are many excellent reasons available for behaving morally, doing good to others and demonstrating compassion. None of these reasons require that we stop being skeptical and place faith in Iron Age mythologies. CRAIG S. SHOEMAKE, VIA EMAIL

Specifics needed

Re: 'Get Snowden' (Metro, June 18) To letter writer Herb Stark: Before you go declaring Snowden guilty of treason, tell us exactly what laws he broke and to whom he's betrayed us. JOSEPH CONNELL, VIA EMAIL

Forward thinking: Le Toux is loving midfield

MLS. Career forward leads league in assists after switching to midfield, excited to face former team.

The mark of a great coach is making adjustments that elevate a team's success. One of the ways Union manager John Hackworth has done that was by switching Sebastien Le Toux, a career forward, to midfield.

The move has worked wonders for Le Toux and the Union as he leads MLS in assists (six) and the team sits in third in the East at 6-5-4.

"I'm not really looking at that because it's just a stat," said Le Toux, of the assists. "What I'm looking for is our team to win games and be atop of the standings, and get to the playoffs."

In the Union's last game against Columbus, Le Toux dished out two assists in a 3-0 victory. He said the adjustment from forward to midfield hasn't been too hard.

"It's not too different for me playing right midfielder compared to forward," Le Toux said. "I'm more comfortable playing forward, but I played some midfield previously. I knew that the team needed me and I'll do whatever it takes to help the team win."

The Union will face New York (7-5-4) Sunday at 5 p.m. Last season, Le Toux played briefly with the Red Bulls after a trade from Vancouver. He teamed up with one of his French soccer idols, Thierry Henry.

"I followed him all throughout his career with Arsenal, Barcelona and the French national team so, for me, it was a fantastic experience," said Le Toux. "I realized playing with him why he was so successful throughout his career."

Flyers. Orange and Black will use buyout on Briere, per reports

Danny Briere is getting his walking papers.

The Flyers will use their compliance buyout on the 35-year-old center, according to multiple reports. ESPN first reported the news citing sources that said Briere was told of his fate last week in a meeting with GM Paul Holmgren.

The team isn't commenting on the situation and the Flyers can't make the move official until two days after the Stanley Cup Final ends.

By buying out Briere, the Flyers will cut $6.5 million off the salary cap. The team still owes Briere $5 million on the eight-year, $52 million deal he inked in 2007. He has two years remaining on his contract. METRO
